Case No. 11-41013

Adversary No. 12-04171

ORDER GRANTING TRUSTEE
PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

1 This matter came before the Court on April 15, 2013, on the Motions for Summary 2 Judgment as to Claims Relating to Transfers by Debtor & Invalidity of Trust and as to Claim of 3 Denial of Discharge, filed by Mark D. Waldron, Trustee for the estate of Donald G. Huber 4 (Trustee) against Donald G. Huber (Debtor). At the conclusion of the hearing, the Court took 5 the matter under advisement. Based on the arguments and pleadings presented, the order of 6 the Court is as follows:

7 The Debtor has been involved in real estate development and management in the 8 Puget Sound area for over 40 years. He graduated from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma 9 with a degree in Business Administration and Sociology. In 1968, he founded United Western 10 Development, Inc. (UWD) with its principal place of business located in Tacoma, Washington.
11 The purpose was to use it as a vehicle to engage in real estate development. The Debtor still 12 serves as its President, although he is partially retired. The operation of UWD and the Debtor's 13 other businesses is now primarily performed by his eldest son, Kevin D. Huber, who has 14 served as UWD's Senior Vice President – Business Development since 2001. Kevin Huber 15 received an MBA from the University of Southern California's Marshall School of Business in 16 1999 and is heavily involved in managing the various Huber-related interests.

17 In the past, the Debtor's residential development customers were not only the typical 18 home buying public, but large home builders such as Quadrant Homes and Polygon Northwest, 19 which have substantial financial backing. Many, if not all, of the projects of the Debtor were 20 undertaken by him through the use of an entity separate and apart from UWD, such as through 21 a corporation or limited liability company, with the Debtor owning all, or a portion, of the project.
22 The Debtor, however, was required on many projects to sign as guarantor in favor of third party 23 lenders, many of them local banks. These appear to be the largest creditors of his bankruptcy.
24 In 2002, UWD added additional staff in order to expand its market share and geographic 25 market within the Pacific Northwest.

1 In 2007, UWD hired an individual who was experienced in investment banking and real 2 estate securitization with a plan to secure additional financing. Subsequently, UWD entered 3 into an engagement letter with Houlihan Lokey, a private finance group, to assist it in raising 4 approximately $55 million in capital. The Private Placement Memorandum was completed in 5 August 2008. The funds were to be used to pay off existing debt, provide additional working 6 capital for present and future needs, and to fund the transaction fees. The cost of the “due 7 diligence” requirements was substantial, but in late September or early October 2008, the 8 Debtor embarked on a fund raising trip to New York City. The Debtor/UWD, however, proved 9 to be unsuccessful in its attempt to secure additional financing, receiving only one verbal offer
10 and no written offers. On October 10, 2008, UWD terminated the agreement with Houlihan 11 Lokey, partly due to the market turmoil that was by then affecting the real estate market 12 nationwide, further dimming their chances of securing additional funding.

13 In 2007, the Debtor had and was in partnership on many of his projects with Robert 14 Terhune, who was also a guarantor of many of the same projects. In a series of emails 15 entered into the record as exhibits between the Debtor and Mr. Terhune, it became apparent 16 that several of their joint projects were beginning to unwind due to a lack of capital, particularly 17 with the withdrawal and cancellation of the Quadrant Homes projects. The Debtor placed ever 18 increasing pressure on Mr. Terhune from the spring of 2008, through the end of the year to 19 become current on monies he believed he was owed. When Mr. Terhune also threatened to 20 set up his own spendthrift trust, the Debtor through his counsel made it clear to Mr. Terhune 21 that the setting up of such a trust would be fraudulent as to him, as he considered himself a 22 creditor.

23 The Examiner indicated in his report filed with the Court that the Debtor was or had to 24 be aware of the “gathering storm clouds.” In addition to the threat of a collapsing housing 25 market, a review of court files after the establishment of the Trust reflects that several loans in

1 existence in August 2008 were fragile at best. The following are examples set forth in the 2 Examiner's Report:

3 a. In Columbia State Bank v. Donald G. Huber, 10-2-08686-8, Pierce County, Columbia
4 Bank sued the Debtor and his business partner, Robert Terhune, for failure to pay a promissory 5 note of $3,370,000 executed on November 30, 2007, and secured by certain real property
6 known as Ridge at Molasses Creek, LLC. The Debtor had personally guaranteed the note.
7 The original maturity date of the note was June 1, 2008, but the borrowers negotiated an 8 extension on that very day until December 1, 2008. No interest payments were subsequently 9 made, and the loan was not paid at maturity. Columbia Bank issued a Notice of Default on 10 February 5, 2009, and following foreclosure, the property was sold on July 10, 2009, in partial 11 satisfaction of the obligation. The state court granted a default judgment for Columbia Bank 12 against the Debtor on his guaranty for the remaining $1,659,245.46 on April 23, 2010. That 13 obligation remains outstanding.

14 b. In Frontier Bank v. Black Lake Estates, et al., 09-2-09503-3, Snohomish County, 15 Frontier Bank sued Black Lake Estates, LLC (one of the Debtor's real estate holdings), the 16 Debtor and Robert Terhune for failure to pay a promissory note of $1,706,000 executed on 17 April 30, 2007. The Debtor had personally guaranteed the note. The maturity date of the note 18 was extended multiple times, the last time from July 15, 2008, to October 15, 2008. An interest 19 payment was made for approximately $9,000 on September 15, 2008, and although due and 20 owing, no subsequent interest payments were made on this loan. Although Frontier Bank did 21 not serve process on the Debtor until at least May 29, 2009, presumably he would have 22 anticipated litigation if the loan was not repaid. The state court granted summary judgment for 23 Frontier Bank against the Debtor on April 22, 2010, and that obligation remains unpaid.

24 c. In Anchor Bank v. Oakland Bay Estates, LLC, 09-2016750-3, Pierce County, Anchor 25 Bank sued Oakland Bay Estates, LLC (one of the Debtor's real estate holding LLCs), the

1 Debtor and once again his business partner, Robert Terhune, for failure to pay a promissory 2 note of $588,250 executed on March 13, 2006. The Debtor had personally guaranteed the 3 note. The maturity date of the note was extended multiple times, the last time from July 1, 4 2008, to January 1, 2009, although the extension was not signed until the day after the Trust 5 was signed. On September 30, 2008, an interest reserve account was established on the 6 company's books and interest payments were applied against this account until funds were 7 reduced to zero in February 2009; no subsequent interest payments were made on this loan.
8 The state court granted summary judgment in favor of Anchor Bank against the Debtor on April 9 23, 2010. The obligation remains unpaid.

10 d. In a separate action Anchor Mutual Savings Bank v. Terhune et. al., 10-2-16750-3, 11 Anchor Bank sued the Debtor and Mr. Terhune for Oakland Bay Estates' failure to pay a 12 different promissory note of $1,101,750 executed on January 23, 2006. The Debtor had 13 personally guaranteed the note. The maturity date of the note was extended multiple times, 14 the last time from July 1, 2008, to January 1, 2009, although the extension was not signed until 15 September 24, 2008. On September 30, 2008, an interest reserve account was established on 16 the company's books and interest payments were applied against this account until funds were 17 reduced to zero in February 2009. No subsequent interest payments were made on this loan.
18 The state court granted summary judgment against the Debtor on April 23, 2010.

19 It is well documented that in 2007 and 2008 nationally, as well as locally, the real estate 20 market began to deteriorate due to the collapse of the subprime mortgage market and the 21 implementation of more restrictive lending standards. On August 19, 2008, Kevin Huber, on 22 behalf of his father, emailed attorney Harold Snow, an estate planning attorney, because "[m]y 23 father has some assets that he would like to protect and shield." The Debtor subsequently 24 retained Mr. Snow to set up an asset protection trust, called the Donald Huber Family Trust 25 (Trust), which was established on September 23, 2008. Correspondence after drafting the

1 Trust document acknowledges that one of the Debtor's principal goals for creating the Trust
2 was to "protect a portion of [the Debtor's] assets from [his] creditors." In a number of emails 3 between the Debtor and Mr. Snow, the Debtor expressed urgency in setting up the Trust.

4 With the assistance of Mr. Snow, the Debtor transferred $10,000 in cash and his 5 ownership or membership interest in over 25 entities into DGH, LLC, an Alaska limited liability 6 company, set up on September 4, 2008, to receive those interests. DGH, LLC, after it was 7 established, was owned 99% by the Trust and 1% by Kevin Huber, its manager. UWD's 8 shares were transferred directly into the Trust and not through DGH, LLC. Assets such as the 9 Debtor's residence at 8310 Warren Street in Tacoma were conveyed to an Alaska corporation 10 (8310, LLC) and then into DGH, LLC. The 8310, LLC then leased the residence to the Debtor, 11 and the Trust made the mortgage payments. The corporate assets were transferred in a 12 similar fashion via quit claim deed to an Alaska corporation, then the new entity's interest into 13 DGH, LLC. The Debtor acknowledges that he received no consideration for the transfers.

14 In summary, the assets owned or partially owned by the Debtor, either directly or 15 indirectly, prior to the Trust implementation consisted of approximately 13 development 16 projects, his residence and the residence of his disabled daughter, interests in several 17 shopping centers, a few corporations, and $3 million dollars in uncollectable receivables. As of 18 July 2010, and after the Trust was created and further after several entities/projects were either 19 foreclosed or sold, the Debtor personally owned only a 5% interest in the James Center
20 Professional Plaza, worthless notes and accounts receivable, and a 50% interest in Burnett 21 Highlands, LLC. Meanwhile the Trust appeared to own the Debtor's holding and real estate 22 operating companies, such as UWD Group, LLC, UWD Management, LLC, and DGH, LLC, as 23 well as the residence occupied by his disabled daughter, an 85% interest in both the Kimball 24 Center, LLC and Pioneer Plaza, LLC, PSEA, LLC, and Sure Seal, LLC. The Debtor was the 25 trustor of the Trust, while Kevin Huber, Amber Haines, and Alaska USA Trust Company

1 (AUSA) were trustees. There was only one asset of the Trust held in Alaska, which is a 2 certificate of deposit for $10,000 transferred there by the Debtor. All other assets are located in 3 Washington State.

4 The ultimate beneficiaries of the Trust, beside the Debtor, consist of his sons Kevin and 5 Dillon, daughters Darby and Neysa, and stepchildren Amber, Seth, Cedar and Star. The 6 Debtor also has grandchildren that the Trust assists in paying for their educational expenses.
7 The Trust established by the Debtor generated $345,248 in discretionary beneficiary income in 8 2010, and $360,000 in 2009.

9 In August 2011, the Debtor filed an amended Schedule I reflecting then current income 10 of $17,444 per month. Of this amount, $1,300 was in the form of the Debtor's social security 11 benefit. He also received social security income for each of his two minor children. The Debtor 12 received trust income of $14,500 per month. The Debtor has provided documents showing the 13 disbursements from the Trust assets following the resignation of Kevin Huber as a trustee.
14 From October 1, 2010, through July 30, 2012, some of the expenses that the Trust paid out 15 include the following:

16 Don Huber personal expenses: $9,977.09

17 Dylan Huber personal expenses: $6,055.32

18 Darby Huber personal expenses: $4,775.32

19 Groceries: $7,081.17

20 Loan payments: $2,325.05

21 Home personal expenses: $1,363.51

22 Cash: $17,000.00

23 Educational expenses for children and grandchildren: $66,502.14

24 Payments to Debtor's former spouse: $14,125.80

25 The payments to the Debtor's former spouse extended from October 2010, through July 2012.

1           The total amount paid out from the Trust assets between October 1, 2010, and July 30, 2 2012, was $571,332.81. From the date of the filing of the chapter 11 petition on February 10, 3 2011, through July 30, 2012, the amount of the distributions was $406,837.27.

4           The Trustee contends that the Debtor made requests for disbursement from Kevin 5 Huber, Kevin then prepared a request for a payment, and AUSA approved the disbursement, 6 without any inquiry. The Debtor asserts, however, that Kevin Huber at times did refuse his 7 requests for disbursements. It does not appear as if Kevin actually met with the 8 representatives of AUSA. Further, the record before this Court indicates that AUSA did nothing 9 to become involved with the perseverance and/or protection of the assets of the Trust and was 10 acting merely in the nature of a straw man.

11           The Debtor filed for chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on February 10, 2011. On May 12 31, 2011, creditor Anchor Mutual Savings Bank filed a Motion for Appointment of Chapter 11
13 Trustee or Conversion to Chapter 7, with a hearing set for June 23, 2011. On June 23, 2011, 14 the Court entered an agreed Order re: Motion for Appointment of Chapter 11 Trustee or 15 Conversion to Chapter 7, which provided that the U.S. Trustee would appoint an examiner “to 16 investigate and report the financial status of Debtor, including, but not necessarily limited to 17 pre-petition transfers and the propriety of said transactions and shall have full subpoena 18 powers concerning any and all parties necessary to thoroughly investigate said issues.”
19 (Bankruptcy Case No. 11-41013, Docket #61). The appointment of Eric D. Orse and Orse &
20 Company, Inc. to serve as examiner was approved on June 27, 2011, and the Examiner's 21 Report was filed on September 30, 2011. The case was converted to chapter 7, title 11 on 22 October 21, 2011. The Plaintiff in this action is the duly appointed chapter 7 trustee. On 23 November 19, 2012, an Order Granting Preliminary Injunction was entered preventing selected 24 disbursements from the Trust.

1 Law

2 A party seeking summary judgment bears the burden of demonstrating that there is no 3 genuine dispute as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter
4 of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56; Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-23, 106 S. Ct. 2548
5 (1986). All inferences drawn from the evidence presented must be drawn in favor of the party 6 opposing summary judgment, and all evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to 7 that party. Summary judgment should be granted if, after taking all reasonable inferences in 8 the nonmoving party's favor, the court finds that no reasonable jury could find for the 9 nonmoving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986).
10 The responding party must present affirmative evidence in order to defeat a properly supported 11 motion for summary judgment. The responding party may not rest upon mere allegations or 12 denials of his pleadings, but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue 13 for trial. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. at 256.

14 The moving party need only identify that evidence “which it believes demonstrates the 15 absence of a genuine issue of material fact.” Caneva v. Sun Communities Operating Ltd.
16 P’ship (In re Caneva), 550 F.3d 755, 761 (9th Cir. 2008) (internal quotation marks omitted)
17 (quoting Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323). Once the party meets this initial burden, 18 the burden shifts to the nonmovant “to set forth, by affidavit or as otherwise provided in Rule 19 56, specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.” F.T.C. v. Stefanchik, 559 F.3d 20 924, 927–28 (9th Cir. 2009) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

21 The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals (Ninth Circuit) has determined that “[i]n opposing 22 summary judgment, a nonmoving party must go beyond the pleadings and, by her own 23 affidavits, or by the depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, designate 24 specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.” Bias v. Moynihan, 508 F.3d 1212, 25 1218 (9th Cir. 2007) (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477

1 U.S. 317, 324 (1986)); see also Estate of Tucker ex rel. Tucker v. Interscope Records, Inc., 2 515 F.3d 1019, 1033 n.14 (9th Cir. 2008). The nonmoving party must present significant 3 probative evidence to support his or her allegations.

4 A. Validity of the Trust

5 The Trustee initially contends that the Trust should be invalidated under Washington 6 State law. The Trust was created in the State of Alaska and designates the law of Alaska to 7 govern the Trust. Alaska recognizes self-settled asset protection trusts, see AS 34.40.110, but 8 Washington does not, see RCW 19.36.020. As such, the parties agree there is a conflict in the 9 laws of the two states, and the Court must look to choice of law rules for guidance.

10 1. Choice of Law

11 “In federal question cases with exclusive jurisdiction in federal court, such as 12 bankruptcy, the court should apply federal, not forum state, choice of law rules.” Lindsay v.
13 Beneficial Reinsurance Co. (In re Lindsay), 59 F.3d 942, 948 (9th Cir. 1995). In applying 14 federal choice of law rules, courts in the Ninth Circuit follow the approach of the Restatement 15 (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971) (Restatement). Liberty Tool & Mfg. v. Vortex Fishing Sys.
16 Inc. (In re Vortex Fishing Sys, Inc.), 277 F.3d 1057, 1069 (9th Cir. 2002). Section 270 of the 17 Restatement addresses the validity of an inter vivos trust in movables in relevant part as 18 follows:

19 An inter vivos trust of interests in movables is valid if valid

20 (a) under the local law of the state designated by the settlor to govern the 21 validity of the trust, provided that this state has a substantial relation to the trust 22 and that the application of its law does not violate a strong public policy of the 23 state with which, as to the matter at issue, the trust has its most significant 24 relationship under the principles stated in § 6.<sup>1</sup>

24 <sup>1</sup> Section 6(2) sets forth general factors for consideration in a choice of law analysis, as follows:

25 (a) the needs of the interstate and international systems,
(b) the relevant policies of the forum,

1 Comment b clarifies when a state has a substantial relation to the trust and when the law of the 2 designated state will not be applied:

3 b. Law designated by the settlor to govern validity of the trust. Effect will be 4 given to a provision in the trust instrument that the validity of the trust shall be 5 governed by the local law of a particular state, provided that this state has a 6 substantial relation to the trust and that the application of its local law does not 7 violate a strong public policy of the state with which as to the matter at issue the 8 trust has its most significant relationship.

9 A state has a substantial relation to a trust when it is the state, if any, which the 10 settlor designated as that in which the trust is to be administered, or that of the 11 place of business or domicile of the trustee at the time of the creation of the trust, 12 or that of the location of the trust assets at that time, or that of the domicile of the 13 settlor, at that time, or that of the domicile of the beneficiaries. There may be 14 other contacts or groupings of contacts which will likewise suffice.

15 Although as to most grounds for invalidity the local law of the designated state 16 will be applied, provided that this state has a substantial relation to the trust, it 17 will not be applied if this would violate a strong public policy of the state with 18 which as to the matter in issue the trust has its most significant relationship.
19 Thus, where the settlor creates a revocable trust in a state other than that of his 20 domicile, in order to avoid the application of the local law of his domicile giving his 21 surviving spouse a forced share of his estate, it may be held that the local law of 22 his domicile is applicable, even though he has designated as controlling the local 23 law of the state in which the trust is created and administered.

24 Under the Restatement, the Debtor's choice of Alaska law designated in the Trust 25 should be upheld if Alaska has a substantial relation to the Trust. Restatement § 270(a).
Comment b provides that "a state has a substantial relation to a trust if at the time the trust is created: (1) the trustee or settlor is domiciled in the state; (2) the assets are located in the state; and (3) the beneficiaries are domiciled in the state. These contacts with the state are not exclusive." In re Zukerkorn, 484 B.R. 182, 192 (9th Cir. BAP 2012). In the instant case, it is

- (c) the relevant policies of other interested states and the relative interests of those states in the determination of the particular issue,
  - (d) the protection of justified expectations,
  - (e) the basic policies underlying the particular field of law,
  - (f) certainty, predictability and uniformity of result, and
  - (g) ease in the determination and application of the law to be applied.

1 undisputed that at the time the Trust was created, the settlor was not domiciled in Alaska, the 2 assets were not located in Alaska, and the beneficiaries were not domiciled in Alaska. The 3 only relation to Alaska was that it was the location in which the Trust was to be administered 4 and the location of one of the trustees, AUSA.

5           Conversely, it is undisputed that at the time the Trust was created, the Debtor resided in 6 Washington; all of the property placed into the Trust, except a $10,000 certificate of deposit, 7 was transferred to the Trust from Washington; the creditors of the Debtor were located in 8 Washington; the Trust beneficiaries were Washington residents; and the attorney who 9 prepared the Trust documents and transferred the assets into the Trust was located in 10 Washington. Accordingly, while Alaska had only a minimal relation to the Trust, using the test 11 set forth in Comment b, Washington had a substantial relation to the Trust when the Trust was 12 created.

13           Additionally, Washington State has a strong public policy against self-settled asset 14 protection trusts. Specifically, pursuant to RCW 19.36.020, transfers made to self-settled trusts 15 are void as against existing or future creditors. Carroll v. Carroll, 18 Wn.2d 171, 175 (1943).
16 This statute has been in existence for well over a century, as it was first enacted in 1854. This 17 policy is consistent with those in other states. For instance, in Marine Midland Bank v. Portnoy 18 (In re Portnoy), 201 B.R. 685, 701 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996), the bankruptcy court considered the 19 public policy of New York against self-settled trusts when determining a choice of law issue: 20 “Portnoy may not unilaterally remove the characterization of property as his simply by 21 incorporating a favorable choice of law provision into a self-settled trust of which he is the 22 primary beneficiary. Equity would not countenance such a practice.” As with New York, 23 Washington has a policy that a debtor should not be able to escape the claims of his creditors 24 by utilizing a spendthrift trust. Thus, in accordance with § 270 of the Restatement, this Court

1 will disregard the settlor's choice of Alaska law, which is obviously more favorable to him, and 2 will apply Washington law in determining the Trustee's claim regarding validity of the Trust.

3 2. RCW 19.36.020

4 Interests in property are determined by state law. Butner v. United States, 440 U.S. 48, 5 54-55, 99 S. Ct. 914 (1979). RCW 19.36.020 provides in relevant part as follows:

6 That all deeds of gift, all conveyances, and all transfers or assignments, verbal 7 or written, of goods, chattels or things in action, made in trust for the use of the 8 person making the same, shall be void as against the existing or subsequent 9 creditors of such person.

10 The Trust is admittedly a self-settled trust. In accordance with RCW 19.36.020, the 11 Debtor's transfers of assets into the Trust were void as transfers made into a self-settled trust.
12 See Rigby v. Mastro (In re Mastro), 465 B.R. 576, 611 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 2011) (where a 13 bankruptcy judge applying Washington State law held that the debtors' transfers of assets into 14 a self-settled trust were void). The Debtor has provided no legal authority to the contrary.
15 Accordingly, the Debtor's transfers of assets into the Trust are void, and the Trustee is entitled 16 to summary judgment as a matter of law to the extent the Trustee seeks to have the transfers 17 invalidated.

18 The Debtor's untimely Supplemental Memorandum does not warrant a different result.
19 As set forth in the Trustee's Memorandum of Authorities filed in response to the Supplemental 20 Memorandum, the issue presented does not satisfy RCW 2.60.020. RCW 19.36.020 clearly 21 determines that the transfer of assets into a self-settled trust is void. Thus, there is no need 22 and grounds do not exist to have the issue certified to the Washington State Supreme Court.

23 B. Alter Ego Doctrine

24 Alternatively, the Trustee seeks to have the Trust declared the alter ego of the Debtor 25 and apply "reverse piercing" to the Trust in order to bring its assets into the bankruptcy estate.

1 The Debtor contends that issues of material fact exist regarding the Debtor's intent in creating 2 the Trust, thereby precluding summary judgment on this claim.

3 In determining whether alter ego liability applies, the Court applies the law of the forum
4 state. E.g., Towe Antique Ford Found. v. I.R.S., 999 F.2d 1387, 1391 (9th Cir. 1993).<sup>2</sup> 5 Washington recognizes the alter ego doctrine in the context of corporations: "Where a private 6 person so dominates and controls a corporation that such corporation is his alter ego, a court is 7 justified in piercing the veil of corporate entity and holding that the corporation and private 8 person are one and the same." Standard Fire Ins. Co. v. Blakeslee, 54 Wn. App. 1, 5 (1989) 9 (quoting Pohlman Inv. Co. v. Virginia City Gold Mining Co., 184 Wash. 273, 283 (1935)). The 10 Trustee acknowledged at the summary judgment hearing that no court in Washington has 11 applied the alter ego doctrine in a trust context, but asks the Court to decide this issue of first 12 impression in his favor. In the absence of controlling authority, the Court must attempt to 13 determine how the Washington State Supreme Court would resolve this issue. See Babitt v.
14 Vebeliunas (In re Vebeliunas), 332 F.3d 85, 90-91 (2nd Cir. 2003).

15 The Court has reviewed the federal cases cited by the Trustee that have applied the 16 alter ego doctrine to trusts based on the forum state law. These cases, however, are not 17 controlling and shed no light on whether Washington courts would extend the alter ego theory 18 to trusts. It is clear that federal courts that have chosen to extend this doctrine to trusts have 19 done so after careful review and analysis of the forum state's statutes and case law. The 20 Trustee has failed to present any Washington authority, or any argument predicated on 21 Washington law, to assist this Court in making a determination as to whether Washington 22 courts would extend the alter ego doctrine to trusts. The Trustee further has failed to address 23 whether a trust, as opposed to a trustee, can legally be the alter ego of an individual, an issue

24 <sup>2</sup> None of the cases cited by the Trustee requires this Court to apply the federal common law of alter ego 25 in this case. Moreover, the federal cases cited by the Trustee in support of his argument to extend alter ego liability to trusts in Washington, including Goodrich v. Briones (In re Schwarzkopf), 626 F.3d 1032, 1037 (9th Cir. 2010), uniformly applied the forum state law of alter ego.

1 that has been thoughtfully considered by leading trust experts and several state courts, 2 including recently by the California Court of Appeals in Greenspan v. LADT, LLC, 191 Cal. App.
3 4th 486, 521-22 (2011). See Elizabeth M. Schurig & Amy P. Jetel, 1 Asset Protection: Dom. &
4 Int'l L. & Tactics § 2:10 (2013); Richard W. Nenno, 2 Asset Protection: Dom. & Int'l L. & Tactics
5 § 14A:120 (2013) (a trust's status as a non-entity logically precludes a trust from being an alter 6 ego, but it is reasonable to ask whether a trustee is the alter ego of a defendant who made a 7 transfer into a trust).

8         The Trustee has the burden of demonstrating that it is entitled to summary judgment as 9 a matter of law. Absent any Washington authority or argument to support Trustee's position, 10 this Court will not speculate as to whether Washington courts would apply the alter ego 11 doctrine in the trust context, and if so, whether they would limit application to trustees as in the 12 Greenspan case. Accordingly, the Court concludes that the Trustee has not met its burden on 13 the alter ego theory. Notwithstanding this, in light of the Court's decision as to the invalidity of 14 the transfers pursuant to RCW 19.36.020, the Court need not decide the alter ego issue under 15 Washington law.

16 C.     11 U.S.C. § 548(e)(1)

17         The Trustee also seeks summary judgment under 11 U.S.C. § 548(e)(1), arguing that 18 the Debtor's transfers of assets into the Trust should be avoided. That this Court has 19 determined already that such transfers are void under RCW 19.36.020 does not preclude a 20 determination that the transfers also are fraudulent under § 548(e)(1). See Mastro, 465 B.R. at 21 610-611.

22             11 U.S.C. § 548(e)(1) provides as follows:

23             In addition to any transfer that the trustee may otherwise avoid, the trustee may 24             avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property that was made on or within 10 years before the date of the filing of the petition, if —

25             (A)     such transfer was made to a self-settled trust or similar device;

- 1 (B) such transfer was by the debtor;
- 2 (C) the debtor is a beneficiary of such trust or similar device; and
- 3 (D) the debtor made such transfer with actual intent to hinder, delay,
- 4 or defraud any entity to which the debtor was or became, on or after the date that such transfer was made, indebted.

5 The parties agree that each of the elements of § 548(e)(1) has been established except for the 6 last element: whether the Debtor made the transfers to the Trust “with actual intent to hinder, 7 delay, or defraud any entity to which the debtor was or became, on or after the date that such 8 transfer was made, indebted.” The Trustee contends that the overwhelming evidence 9 establishes the Debtor’s intent to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors, while the Debtor 10 argues there is an issue of material fact as to his intent.

11 The Trustee has the burden of proving the elements of a fraudulent conveyance by a 12 preponderance of the evidence. Thompson v. Jonovich (In re Food & Fibre Prot., Ltd.), 168 13 B.R. 408, 418 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1994) (citing Grogan v. Garner, 498 U.S. 279, 111 S. Ct. 654
14 (1991)); see W. Wire Works, Inc. v. Lawler (In re Lawler), 141 B.R. 425, 428 (9th Cir. BAP 15 1992) (“A fair reading of the Supreme Court’s opinion leads to the inference that the 16 preponderance standard applies in all bankruptcy proceedings grounded in allegations of 17 fraud.”).

18 “The language used for the level of intent tracks identical language in section 19 548(a)(1)(A), presumably to allow courts to use cases and interpretive guides for such 20 language (which has been part of Anglo-American jurisprudence since at least 1571) when 21 called upon to construe section 548(e).” 5 Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 548.07[3][d] (Alan N.
22 Resnick & Henry J. Sommer eds., 16th ed.). Fraudulent intent may be established on the basis
23 of circumstantial evidence. Barclay v. Mackenzie (In re AFI Holding, Inc.), 525 F.3d 700, 704 24 (9th Cir. 2008). In assessing the evidence, courts consider “badges of fraud,” which are 25 “circumstances so commonly associated with fraudulent transfers that their presence gives rise

1 to an inference of intent.” In re Roca, 404 B.R. 531, 543 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2009) (internal quotes 2 omitted).

3 The Ninth Circuit has articulated that

4 [a]mong the more common circumstantial indicia of fraudulent intent at the time 5 of the transfer are: (1) actual or threatened litigation against the debtor; (2) a 6 purported transfer of all or substantially all of the debtor's property; (3) 7 insolvency or other unmanageable indebtedness on the part of the debtor; (4) a special relationship between the debtor and the transferee; and, after the transfer, (5) retention by the debtor of the property involved in the putative transfer.

8 Acequia, Inc. v. Clinton (In re Acequia, Inc.), 34 F.3d 800, 806 (9th Cir. 1994) (emphasis 9 omitted) (quoting Max Sugarman Funeral Home, Inc. v. A.D.B. Investors, 926 F.2d 1248, 1254-10 55 (1st Cir. 1991)). “The presence of a single badge of fraud may spur mere suspicion; the 11 confluence of several can constitute conclusive evidence of actual intent to defraud, absent 12 ‘significantly clear’ evidence of a legitimate supervening purpose.” Acequia, 34 F.3d at 806 13 (quoting Max Sugarman, 926 F.2d at 1254-55). Once the trustee establishes indicia of fraud, 14 the burden shifts to the transferee to prove some “legitimate supervening purpose” for the 15 transfer. Acequia, 34 F.3d at 806.

16 In support of his motion for summary judgment, the Trustee submitted over one 17 hundred exhibits containing declarations, emails, documents, and pleadings to establish the 18 Debtor’s intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors. Conversely, the only evidence 19 submitted by the Debtor on summary judgment is the Debtor’s deposition testimony taken on 20 September 20, 2011, by counsel for the Examiner. Even though not accompanied by a 21 declaration, the deposition is authenticated for summary judgment as it identifies the names of 22 the deponent and the action, and it includes the reporter’s certification that the deposition is a 23 true record of the testimony of the deponent. See Orr v. Bank of America, 285 F.3d 764, 774 24 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Fed. R. Evid. 901(b); Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e) & 30(f)(1)). Notably, while the 25 deposition references numerous exhibits, the Debtor did not file these exhibits with the Court.

1 Accordingly, the deposition it is of minimal value to the Court, particularly as it fails to designate 2 specific portions rebutting the very specific allegations of the Trustee. See Bias, 508 F.3d at 3 1218. Additionally, the Court arguably has grounds to disregard this deposition since it was 4 taken prior to the Trustee's appointment on October 21, 2011, and does not respond to many 5 of the arguments made by the Trustee in his motion for summary judgment. See Fed. R. Civ.
6 P. 32(a)(1), made applicable by Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7032. Because the Court reaches the same 7 outcome on the Trustee's § 548(e)(1) claim even if the deposition is considered, however, the 8 Court declines to exclude the Debtor's previously taken deposition submitted in opposition to 9 summary judgment.

10           Considering each of the badges of fraud, the evidence submitted by the Trustee first 11 establishes that at the time the Debtor transferred his assets into the Trust, there was 12 threatened litigation against the Debtor. Specifically, it appears that foreclosure of several 13 properties for which the Debtor had guaranteed the bank loans was becoming increasingly 14 certain, including Ridge at Molasses Creek, LLC, Black Lake Estates, and Oakland Bay 15 Estates. The maturity dates on these loans had been extended at least one time; the local and 16 national real estate markets were collapsing; Robert Terhune had not, and apparently could 17 not, repay the Debtor an approximately one million dollar debt, on which the Debtor depended 18 to service the loans; and by March 2008, the Debtor was not making timely payments on his 19 project debts, which he had guaranteed. Ultimately, litigation ensued, beginning in spring 20 2009. While the Debtor's responsive pleading states that nothing indicates the Debtor 21 anticipated that the loans would not be further extended, the Debtor submitted no declaration 22 or evidence in support of this proposition.

23           The Trustee also has established that the Debtor transferred all or substantially all of 24 his property into the Trust. It is undisputed that the Debtor transferred $10,000 in cash and his 25 ownership or membership interest in over 20 entities into DGH, LLC, which was owned 99% by

1 the Trust and 1% by Kevin Huber. These entities included the Debtor's residence at 8310
2 Warren Street; his daughter's residence; interests in several shopping centers; 13 development 3 projects; and a few corporations. The Debtor also transferred UWD's shares directly into the 4 Trust. The Trustee presented evidence that after the Trust was created and several entities 5 were either foreclosed or sold, the Debtor personally owned only a 5% interest in the James 6 Center Professional Plaza, worthless notes and accounts receivable, and a 50% interest in 7 Burnett Highlands, LLC. The Trust, on the other hand, appeared to own most of the Debtor's 8 income-producing assets. According to the Examiner, 71.1% of the Debtor's assets were 9 transferred to the Trust, while 28.9% remained outside the Trust. This has not been rebutted 10 by the Debtor.

11 The Trustee further has established significant indebtedness on the part of the Debtor 12 when he transferred his assets into the Trust. The Trustee's evidence indicates that in 2007, 13 the Debtor began to experience substantial financial problems. To raise money, he had to sell 14 a portion of his interest in the James Center Professional Plaza, which generated a $177,000 15 tax in 2007. The evidence, including emails from the Debtor, establishes that the Debtor was 16 unable to pay this tax debt when due, and it remains unpaid to date. Additionally, during the 17 period that the Trust was formed and assets transferred, the Debtor had increased his pressure 18 on Robert Terhune, without success, in order to obtain capital to service his debts. As set forth 19 in the Debtor's emails, the debt load was "strangling" the Debtor and "bills [went] unpaid."
20 Furthermore, during this period, the Debtor had expended approximately $70,000 - $100,000 21 per month for one year in his efforts to obtain funding through Houlihan Lokey, which also 22 proved unsuccessful.

23 As to the fourth badge of fraud, the Debtor does not dispute that there is a special 24 relationship, as he is both the trustor and beneficiary of the trust.

1           The Trustee also has established that the Debtor effectively retained the property 2 transferred into the Trust. While the Debtor indicated in his deposition that he did not retain 3 the right to direct how or if distributions were made from the Trust, it appears that substantially 4 all of the Debtor's requests for distributions were granted. Only one reference was set forth in 5 the deposition of any refusal. Furthermore, the only party to review the requests was his son 6 Kevin Huber, with whom he was in business at the time. The record indicates that AUSA did 7 absolutely nothing to become involved with the preservation or protection of the Trust assets, 8 but merely acted as a straw man. Additionally, the Debtor continued to reside in a Trust asset 9 and to receive some $14,500 per month in trust income, which went toward his personal 10 expenses, loan payments, cash, education expenses for his family, and payments to his former 11 spouse, all at the expense of his creditors. Based on the evidence before the Court, the only 12 reasonable conclusion is that the Debtor continued to use and enjoy the Trust assets just as he 13 did before the transfers.

14           The Trustee has established that the five badges of fraud exist in this case; the Debtor 15 has not raised a genuine dispute as to these badges. In addition, the Trustee's evidence 16 indicates that in the face of the declining real estate market, the Debtor's inability to secure 17 funding, and mounting debt, the Debtor was afraid that he would lose everything he had 18 worked so hard to achieve. While the Debtor alleges that he consulted Mr. Snow and created 19 the Trust merely for estate planning purposes, the timing of the Trust's creation, the facts 20 surrounding its creation, and timing of the asset transfers support a finding of a motive other 21 than estate planning, that of asset protection at the expense of his creditors. Furthermore, the 22 Debtor has not presented any evidence refuting the Trustee's overwhelming evidence that 23 when the Trust was created, the Debtor was desperate to protect his assets and 24 knowledgeable of the purpose of a spendthrift trust.

1 The Debtor argues that his reliance on legal counsel in creating the Trust negates 2 fraudulent intent. Even if the Debtor had presented evidence that he relied on the advice of 3 counsel in creating the Trust and transferring his assets, such reliance must have been in good 4 faith. See First Beverly Bank v. Adeeb (In re Adeeb), 787 F.2d 1339, 1343 (9th Cir. 1986)
5 (“[g]enerally, a debtor who acts in reliance on the advice of his attorney lacks the intent 6 required to deny him a discharge,” but such reliance must be in good faith). A finding that the 7 debtor knew that the purpose of the transfers was to hinder or delay creditors “precludes the 8 defense of good faith reliance on the advice of an attorney even if the client is otherwise 9 innocent of any improper purpose.” Adeeb, 787 F.2d at 1343. In the instant case, the Debtor’s 10 deposition testimony establishes that he was well aware of the effect of a spendthrift trust, as 11 he testified that through counsel he forbid Mr. Terhune from putting his assets into a spendthrift 12 trust until the parties reached an agreement as to the debt Mr. Terhune owed him. The Debtor 13 clarified his reasoning: “Mr. Terhune didn’t have anything other than the properties that we 14 owned together and his house. So if he transferred them, I’d have nothing to secure me.”
15 Additionally, at the hearing, the Debtor failed to present any plausible reason to create a self-16 settled asset protection trust other than to shield assets from creditors.

17 Accordingly, the evidence presented by the Trustee supports an inference of actual 18 fraudulent intent by the Debtor to hinder, delay, or defraud his current or future creditors, in 19 violation of § 548(e)(1)(D). The Trustee is entitled to summary judgment on this claim as a 20 matter of law.

21 D. 11 U.S.C. § 544(b)(1) and RCW 19.40.041(a)

22 Section 544(b)(1) gives the Trustee the authority to bring an action to avoid fraudulent 23 transfers under state law. Under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (UFTA), a transfer is 24 fraudulent if the debtor acts with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor, or transfers 25 “[w]ithout receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation.”

1 RCW 19.40.041(a)(1) - (2). The party alleging the fraudulent transfer must demonstrate actual 2 intent to defraud by “clear and satisfactory proof.” Clearwater v. Skyline Const. Co., Inc., 67 3 Wn. App. 305, 321 (1992). Circumstantial evidence of intent may be considered. United 4 States v. Black, 725 F. Supp. 2d 1279, 1291 (E.D. Wash. 2010). In determining whether actual 5 intent exists, a court may consider eleven factors, or badges of fraud, set forth in RCW 6 19.40.041(b):

- 7 (1) The transfer or obligation was to an insider;
- 8 (2) The debtor retained possession or control of the property transferred after 9 the transfer;
- 10 (3) The transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed;
- 11 (4) Before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the debtor had 12 been sued or threatened with suit;
- 13 (5) The transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets;
- 14 (6) The debtor absconded;
- 15 (7) The debtor removed or concealed assets;
- 16 (8) The value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably 17 equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation 18 incurred;
- 19 (9) The debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was 20 made or the obligation was incurred;
- 21 (10) The transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was 22 incurred; and
- 23 (11) The debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienor who 24 transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

25 These factors are “non-exclusive and precatory, indicating that other evidence impacting on intent should also be considered.” Sedwick v. Gwinn, 73 Wn. App. 879, 886 (1994).

Several of these badges of fraud overlap those considered in the Ninth Circuit in analyzing 11 U.S.C. § 548. The Court already has determined that the Trustee established the 1 Debtor was threatened with litigation when the transfers occurred; the transfers were of 2 substantially all the Debtor's assets; and the Debtor retained control of the transferred property.

3 The evidence also establishes that as a self-settled trust, the transfer from the Debtor to the 4 Trust was to an insider. For the same reason, the Debtor concedes he did not receive 5 consideration for transferring his assets to the Trust. Additionally, the evidence establishes 6 that by transferring the property into the Trust, the Debtor was attempting to remove the assets 7 from the creditors' reach.

8 In addition to these factors, as set forth in the Court's § 548(e) analysis, the Trustee's 9 evidence further shows that in the face of the declining real estate market, the Debtor's inability 10 to secure funding, and mounting debt, the Debtor was concerned that he would lose all of his 11 assets to his creditors. A review of the evidentiary record before the Court is overwhelming 12 that the Debtor was desperate to protect and shield his assets. There is almost no evidence to 13 the contrary.

14 The Debtor, however, contends that his denial that he had fraudulent intent is sufficient 15 to raise an issue of material fact. In Sedwick, the court concluded that "where the debtor 16 denies that his or her intent was to defraud, the issue cannot be conclusively determined by the 17 trier of fact until it has heard the testimony and assessed the witnesses' credibility," making 18 summary judgment inappropriate. Sedwick, 73 Wn. App. at 887. Sedwick, however, is 19 inapposite because the debtor there submitted not only his own affidavit, but the affidavit 20 testimony of other witnesses that was consistent with the debtor's affidavit. In these affidavits, 21 each witness stated that there was no intent to defraud the plaintiff.

22 In the instant case, the Debtor failed to submit his own declaration regarding his intent, 23 let alone the declarations of other witnesses, such as Mr. Snow and Kevin Huber, who would 24 be the witnesses most likely to testify as to the Debtor's intent in creating the Trust and 25 transferring his assets. Moreover, while the Debtor's deposition testimony states that he

1 created the Trust for estate planning purposes, it does not directly address or deny the 2 evidence submitted by the Trustee establishing that the Debtor wanted to protect his assets in 3 light of his increasingly bleak financial situation. The Court finds that the Debtor's desire to 4 provide for his children and grandchildren through estate planning by protecting his assets that 5 they would otherwise stand to inherit, is not mutually exclusive of the desire to shield his assets 6 from creditors. Accordingly, estate planning alone does not create an issue of fact as to intent.
7 See Adeeb, 787 F.2d at 1343 (where the court held that if a debtor intended to hinder or delay 8 a creditor, he had "the intent penalized by [section 727(a)(2)(A)] notwithstanding any other 9 motivation he may have had for the transfer."). Furthermore, as previously indicated, the 10 Debtor's deposition testimony regarding Mr. Terhune's goal to transfer his assets into his own 11 spendthrift trust establishes that he knew the purpose of a spendthrift trust.

12 Accordingly, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the Debtor, the Trustee 13 has established that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact, and the Trustee is 14 entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law on its UFTA claim based on actual fraudulent 15 intent.<sup>3</sup>

16 E. Denial of Discharge

17 Section 727(a)(2) precludes discharge when the debtor, with intent to hinder, delay, or 18 defraud a creditor has transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed property of the 19 debtor within one year before the petition date, or property of the estate after the petition date.
20 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A) - (B). The Trustee concedes that the Debtor's transfers of his assets 21 into the Trust cannot satisfy § 727(a)(2)(A), as the transfers occurred more than one year 22 before the petition date. Yet the Trustee contends that the Debtor's use of the Trust assets, 23 which belong to the estate, within one year of the date of the filing and the continuing use 24 thereafter satisfies § 727(a)(2)(A) and (B).

25 <sup>3</sup> While the Trustee referenced constructive fraud in passing, this claim was not fully briefed or argued. In light of the Court's conclusion regarding actual intent, the Court need not reach this claim.

1 Denial of discharge under § 727 is construed liberally in favor of the debtor and strictly 2 against those objecting to discharge. Adeeb, 787 F.2d at 1342. A debtor's intent need not be 3 fraudulent to establish § 727(a)(2). Based on the disjunctive language of the statute, it is 4 sufficient if the debtor's intent is to hinder or delay a creditor. Retz v. Samson (In re Retz), 606
5 F.3d 1189, 1200 (9th Cir. 2010). Certain badges of fraud may support a finding of fraudulent 6 intent. Retz, 606 F.3d at 1200.

7 The Trustee's claims are predicated on the assertion that the Debtor wrongfully used 8 assets in the Trust to maintain his pre-petition lifestyle and pay his pre-petition creditors.
9 Although the Court has ruled that transfers of the Debtor's assets into the Trust are void under 10 RCW 19.36.020, the record before the Court establishes that the Debtor created the Trust and 11 transferred his assets pursuant to AS 34.40.110 and with the assistance of legal counsel.
12 Considering that this Court is to construe § 727(a)(2)(A) and (B) liberally in favor of the Debtor 13 and against the creditor, the Court concludes that there is a genuine issue of material fact as to 14 whether the Court should deny his discharge.

15 The Trustee further contends that the Debtor wrongfully used $350,839 in net loss carry 16 forwards that belongs to the Trustee. According to the Trustee, this significantly reduced the 17 Debtor's taxes at the expense of the potential taxes on the bankruptcy estate. While the 18 Debtor's response to summary judgment asserts the Debtor was unaware this was estate 19 property and that it will be returned to the bankruptcy estate, the Debtor has not submitted an 20 affidavit to this effect. Nonetheless, the Trustee has failed to present any evidence of intent by 21 the Debtor to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors in so doing. Because it is the Trustee's burden 22 on summary judgment to establish there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and that 23 he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the Court concludes that the Trustee has not met 24 his burden as to this contention.

1 Finally, the Trustee argues that the Debtor failed to disclose in his bankruptcy 2 schedules that UWD owes the Debtor more than two million dollars for loans made by the 3 Debtor, which is cause for denial of discharge. Section 727(a)(4)(A) provides that the court 4 shall grant a discharge unless “the debtor knowingly and fraudulently, in or in connection with 5 the case – (A) made a false oath or account.” To deny a debtor a discharge under 6 § 727(a)(4)(A), the plaintiff must show by a preponderance of the evidence that: “(1) the debtor 7 made a false oath in connection with the case; (2) the oath related to a material fact; (3) the 8 oath was made knowingly; and (4) the oath was made fraudulently.” Retz, 606 F.3d at 1197 9 (quoting Roberts v. Erhard (In re Roberts), 331 B.R. 876, 882 (9th Cir. BAP 2005)). An 10 omission in the debtor’s bankruptcy schedules or statement of financial affairs can constitute a 11 false oath. Khalil v. Developers Sur. & Indem. Co. (In re Khalil), 379 B.R. 163, 172 (9th Cir.
12 BAP 2007).

13 To demonstrate fraudulent intent, the plaintiff must show that that the debtor made the 14 false oaths or omissions; he knew they were false at the time; and he made them with 15 “intention and purpose of deceiving the creditors.” Retz, 606 F.3d at 1198-99 (quoting Khalil, 16 379 B.R. at 173). “Reckless indifference or disregard for the truth may be circumstantial 17 evidence of intent, but is not sufficient, alone, to constitute fraudulent intent.” Retz, 606 F.3d at 18 1199. Thus, a party objecting to a debtor's discharge on false oath grounds must establish 19 “that the information was omitted for the specific purpose of perpetrating a fraud and not simply 20 because the debtor was careless or failed to fully understand his attorney's instructions.”
21 Dubrowsky v. Estate of Perl binder (In re Dubrowsky), 244 B.R. 560, 571-72 (E.D. N.Y. 2000).

22 The Debtor argues that he at all times has been forthright with the Trustee regarding his 23 UWD business dealings and records. He offers that as part of doing business as an 24 entrepreneur, he made cash infusions to UWD without the expectation that he would be repaid.
25 Yet once again the Debtor provides no independent evidence or affidavit to this effect.

1 Nonetheless, the Trustee has failed to establish that the Debtor intended to deceive his 2 creditors in failing to list loans he made to UWD, particularly as it appears from the deposition 3 testimony of Jorge Duque, UWD's Chief Financial Officer, that he made these loans without the 4 expectation of repayment. As such, the Trustee has not established one of the necessary 5 elements of § 727(a)(4), and consequently is not entitled to summary judgment on this claim.
6 See United States v. Four Parcels of Real Property in Greene and Tuscaloosa Counties in 7 Alabama, 941 F.2d 1428, 1438 (11th Cir. 1991) (en banc) (when the moving party has the 8 burden of proof at trial, the party must carry its initial burden at summary judgment by 9 presenting evidence affirmatively showing, for all essential elements of its case, that no 10 reasonable jury could find for the non-moving party).

11 Based on the foregoing, it is hereby

12 ORDERED that the Trustee is granted summary judgment on his claim made pursuant 13 to RCW 19.36.020; it is further

14 ORDERED that the Trustee is granted summary judgment on his claim made pursuant 15 to 11 U.S.C. § 548(e)(1); it is further

16 ORDERED that the Trustee is granted summary judgment on his claim made pursuant 17 to 11 U.S.C. § 544(b)(1) and RCW 19.40.041(a); it is further

18 ORDERED that the Trustee has not established that he is entitled to summary 19 judgment on his alter ego claim or claims made pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A) and 20 (a)(4).
